right as that just doesn't make sense to have 100% 5 star reviews in the open public rating system. I have been an executive recruiter for the past 8 years, a successful one at that, and I regularly read books on the industry to keep up with trends and information. I bought this book based on the reviews and title. I then received the book and have never had my jaw drop so many times in my life. Who is this guy? His writing is that of a 15 year old with slang and casual phrases that make pretty much no sense to me at times. Then, there are "how to" advice that includes heading to the steam room at the gym to "nail a mega-offeror". I'm sorry, but what exactly does that mean Mr. Allen? Yes, I understand that you mean to say that you can network in the sauna, but following it up with "By the time we'd dry off, we'd be trading soggy business cards and carrying on like Bert and Ernie." Wow. The best this book has to offer is good solid humor. And perhaps the advice on eating non-processed food in the second chapter titled "Making and Taking the Instant Interview Magic Potion" where Mr. Allen plans out a diet for us while we are off drumming up interviews for ourselves. Again, wow. I'd recommend the book "Guerrilla Marketing for Job Hunters 2.0: 1,001 Unconventional Tips, Tricks and Tactics for Landing Your Dream Job (Paperback)" if you're looking for some real advice. A much more professional, realistic and effective book.

I like the content in the book, but it is not organized well. The author jumps around so much I have a hard time looking up specific situations to get timely advice. I did try the breakfast smoothie, and it was great!
